Red Heads

"My hair is so recognizable!" Otto groaned from where he had draped himself over the arm of the safe house's sofa. "It's so white! People can spot it like a mile away!"

Laura smiled from where she was hunched over her laptop. "It's a shame we can't switch hair colors then."

Shelby sat up, a scheming look dawning on her face. "I don't know, something like that could be arranged!"

Laura looked over at Shelby, frowning in disbelief. "I don't actually want white hair Shelby. I don't think it would be very becoming."

"No, but we can do the opposite." Shelby thought for a moment. "I'll be right back!" She said, and was gone before any of the others could stop her.

After about half an hour of being gone, Shelby had come back with a bottle of red hair dye from who-knows-where, and had proceeded to use it to color Otto's hair. The boy had only struggled at all during the first five minutes- Shelby had a surprisingly strong grip.

After the dye had set, Shelby pulled Otto away from the sink and back into the main room to show everyone his new hair color. "Ta-da!" She said, smirking. Otto looked slightly annoying after having his hair pulled at for an hour, but said hair was now a bright red.

Laura pushed her hand against her mouth to stifle her giggles at

Otto's expression. "Well our hair certainly matches now!" She said cheerily, "Shelby did a surprisingly good job of picking the shadeâ€¦"
